

Huntingdon Offices Expand

Leeds Day Solicitors have moved to new purpose-designed offices in Huntingdon.

As part of its expansion programme, the firm has relocated to new offices in Huntingdon.

The offices were officially opened on Friday 25th January 2008 by Jonathan Djanogly MP, who is also a solicitor. On viewing the offices he said "I am pleased to have such a well run and forward thinking local law practice in the Huntingdon Constituency "

The Guest of Honour was Mrs. Elizabeth Hutchinson, of the Windover Family, the Windover Rolls Royce factory and Coachworks having previously stood on the site of the new offices at Godwin House, George Street, Huntingdon.

"Our new offices have been designed to provide us with exactly the facilities we need," says Tamara Glanvill, partner at Leeds Day Solicitors. "It's important for us that we can meet our clients in exactly the right surroundings. We've put a lot of thought into the modern design of our interview rooms and meeting spaces and the working environment for our staff. The office is of a contemporary design, and is an environment of which we are proud – and also represents a significant phase in the growth of Leeds Day."

The opening of the new offices completes what has been a very busy period for the practice during which they have also attained The Law Society Practice management award, LEXCEL, for client care.
